Background

Aurora is a brand designer by trade, having recently expanded her skills in new interactive technologies at Aalto University Media Lab. She is a socially conscious and very conceptual designer, whose poetic and engaging work is committed to making positive change. Naturally curious and expansive, she works with a range of different mediums and picks up new skills quickly— currently, she's building interactive immersive experiences on Unity for virtual reality. Because she has a very solid academic background, research always informs her design decisions.

During her experience at digital design agencies such as Verve and later Bravoure, she's worked on digital branding projects, web design, prototyping, editorial, and motion, among others. She enjoyed being part of a multidisciplinary team, and her wide range of skills have greatly contributed to smooth and fruitful collaborations. Most recently, she's applied those skills at the Department of Art & Media at Aalto University and other freelance work.

Aurora is a Spaniard, born in Zürich, who has lived in various countries around Europe and North America. These experiences fomented a multicultural awareness that makes her a great communicator, highly empathetic and a team player, always bringing a fresh new perspective.

Professionally, she wants to hone her skills while maintaining the versatility and vision required to create holistic experiences that are memorable and meaningful.
